

NIC Offers Innovative Webinar Series: Welcome to `A Deeper Dive`

The National Interoperability Collaborative is proud to announce its first webinar series, which will begin with “Getting to Yes on Privacy and Confidentiality” next month. Click here to learn more and sign up. We’ve designed these presentations to go beyond the traditional webinar format in order to expand the opportunity for ongoing learning and facilitate networking with others interested in the topic of the event.

There are two unique aspects to our “Deeper Dive” webinar-plus series, using the new Collaboration and Communication Hub on NIC’s website. The online portion of the webinars will last one hour, followed by Q&A and discussion on the Hub. Prior to joining the webinar, be sure to register for access to the NIC Hub!

- Before each webinar, we’ll publish a blog that provides a preview and key discussion points relating to the subject being examined. Readers will be invited to go to the NIC Hub to ask questions, offer insights and engage in discussions that will extend the learning from the blog and inform the webinar’s content.
- There will be a Q&A period after presentations during the webinar are completed, but the learning will not end there. Rather, participants will have the opportunity to continue interacting with our expert presenters – and to engage in their own, ongoing conversation with colleagues – by jumping to the NIC Hub.

The first three webinars in this exciting series are:

- Getting to Yes on Privacy and Confidentiality. This webinar will begin at noon (Eastern) on Friday, September 14, 2018. Click here to learn more and sign up.
- Knowledge from the North: What Canada Can Teach US about the Social Determinants. This webinar will take place in late October.
- Striving for Diversity and Equity, Overcoming Bias. This webinar will take place in mid-November.

Our webinar-plus series takes a different approach because it aims for a different outcome. It is designed to be an integral part of an ongoing, action-oriented agenda to advance interoperability and data-sharing. The objective of all of NIC’s work is to provide the information, tools and other resources needed to improve systems and increase collaboration among the multiple domains that impact health and well-being. Please stay tuned for additional details, which we’ll provide in subsequent NIC Updates and on NIC’s website. If you have any questions or comments, write to nic@stewardsofchange.org.
